BYU Introduces New "Alma Pater" Fight Song

In response to the demands of BOYS (the BYU Organization of Young Studs), BYU officials announced that the Cougar fight song has been changed.

"We're tired of singing about an Alma Mater," BOYS president Andro Gustoson announced. "All we ever hear about is women, women, women."

BOYS presented a new "Alma Pater" to BYU officials on Thursday. On Friday, BYU officials gave their final approval of the song.

"The lyrics show a new, fiercer, more conservative, more manly BYU," said BYU Spokesboy Meg Moot. "It makes me excited just singing it."

"We wanted something that the armies of Helaman could sing. We wanted something that said, 'Don't mess with the Elders of Israel,'" explained Gustoson.

BOYS gave the Enquirer an exclusive copy of the lyrics:

Oh rise all loyal BOYS and save this university from non-whites, civil rights, diversity!
Rush Limbaugh is true.
New world order won't do.
Screw women's rights! We love Bo Gritz!
Come on Birchers it's up to you!

Rise and shout! Let's kick liberals out.
We have no room for feminazis.
Turn up the heat! Our Honor Police will spy on all them hot-to-trot-sies.
Iron rule will save this great school for upper classes, not the masses!
Those who join our throng must be conservative and blond!
More white sheep will strengthen the blue—let's go young BOYS of BYU!

Finals? Ahhh....

BYU Registration Brochures Found to Be Hallucinogenic

BYU botanists recently confirmed that the mushrooms pictured on the front of the BYU Fall 1993 Registration pamphlet are of the highly hallucinogenic psilocybin variety.

The botanists began their mushroom research when a number of students reported seeing visions after accidentally consuming the brochure.

According to one student, "My hands were full and so I put the mail in my mouth and I carried it to my room. By the time I got there, all of my Mormonad posters were dripping and my Young Womanhood Medallion started talking to me."

Another victim says he saw the Y on the mountain turn into a giant white rose.

"I saw the face of R.J. Snow in a Cougareat taco salad, and then it became the face of Cher..."

"Mountain bikers were getting hooked on the thorns in the stem," he reports.

Says another, "I saw the face of R.J. Snow in a Cougareat taco salad, and then it became the face of Cher, and then I turned another corner and I understood what it meant."

A fourth student, still affected by consumption of the brochure, believes he is a glass of orange juice.

In the wake of the discovery, the brochure's street price rose to $45 per pamphlet. The Provo postmaster reported mail fraud up fifty percent as students rushed to steal each others' brochures. Although BYU officials have issued an official recall of the brochure, no one has volunteered to bring his/her pamphlet back.

Humanities students recently experienced unpleasant consequences as a result of attending BYU's International Cinema. Many students claim that evil spirits reside in 250 SWKT, and that the spirits manifest themselves while foreign films are shown. Some of these students have recently come forward with their accounts:

April Birk, 18, a freshman now majoring in Beef Science from Bigwater, Montana, recalls: "I had to watch Toto le Heros for class, but I felt uncomfortable seeing the pornography, fornication, incest, murder, arson, suicide, and short shorts...in French! Obviously, this movie was not up to Church standards. The entire time I was there, I felt an evil spirit surround the theater. As I left the cinema, I saw legions of demons standing in line to get in. I could never go back there, so I withdrew from the College of Humanities the next day."

"[She] claims to have sat behind Satan himself..."

Claire Foley, 20, a Recreational Management major from Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada, says: "I still have emotional and moral scars from seeing Delicatessen. That sick and perverted movie featured fornication, cannibalism, murder, arson, and suicide...in French! Worse, I think one of the characters had a nose ring! I clearly felt the presence of the Evil One fill the theater and overtake people while they laughed in wild abandon. I knew I had to get away, and fast. If I hadn't walked out of the theater, I'd still be there today."

Felicity Hamilton, an Honor Code spy who reviews foreign films for Student Review, claims to have sat behind Satan himself twice at International Cinema. Satan sat in the front row, resting his feet on the partition and eating mesquite barbecue potato chips during Howard's End and Best Intentions. "I distinctly remember him enjoying both films, but what stood out was his terrible, sick laughter. He got a kick out of the misuse of procreative powers in Howard's End. And Best Intentions! Well! You can bet he loved all that existential angst about the nature of God! Obviously, Ingmar Bergman didn't have the knowledge of the Restoration, or he wouldn't have to have made such blasphemous films."

In order to discourage Satan and his dark angels, International Cinema will begin showing Church videos in different languages. Next week: On the Way Home in Mongolian with English subtitles.

Signature Card Causes Credit Woes for Campus Statues

After issuing a Signature Card complete with $50 free credit to the parents of the Smith Family Living Center family statue, BYU officials recalled the cards this week, citing overdraft.

The couple, who reportedly rang up over three hundred dollars worth of metallurgy and child development textbooks, Snapple fruit punch, and Bookstore fudge during their first three days with the card, claims ignorance and innocence.

"We're just statues," the woman statue claimed. "They told us to pose with the Signature Cards and we couldn't say no."

"It's their fault," her husband statue argued. "They never checked our credit rating."

"Serves them right," said the Ute statue from his perch west of the library. "They wouldn't give me one because my loincloth isn't 'ZZNEEZ' and because I carry this damn pipe around."

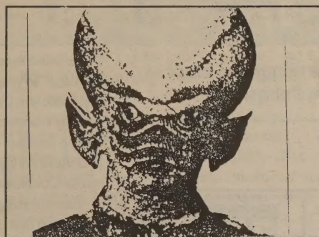

Zowie! Maren Mouritsen is Actually a Space Alien!

BYU's campus community was shocked Monday by Dean of Student Life Maren Mouritsen's revelation that she is actually a space alien.

"Yup, I'm a space alien all right," proclaimed Mouritsen. "Nobody ever asked me before Monday."

According to BYU spokesman Meg Moot, some people became suspicious when Mouritsen was seen sneaking from her third floor Kimball Tower office up to the twelfth floor of the tower to nosh on live laboratory rats. Cougar eat workers reported seeing Mouritsen drinking water with her finger. "A bunch of people who used to watch Mork and Mindy saw her drink a glass of milk, and they immediately informed the proper authorities," said Moot.

Mouritsen plans to continue working for Student Life, claiming that she feels perfectly at home here since nobody else in BYU's administration is from this planet either.

President Lee was unavailable for comment, but his secretary claimed he would return just as soon as "his human outer covering is back from the cleaners."

We're more righteous!

BYU Biblical Scholar Finds Whore of Babylon in his Backyard

World-renowned Biblical scholar and BYU professor Howie Nibble announced yesterday that the famous "whore of Babylon," made legendary in the Book of Revelations, is not really Rome, New York City, or San Francisco, as some Babylon scholars had previously postulated.

Nibble referred to Revelations 17:9, "The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth."

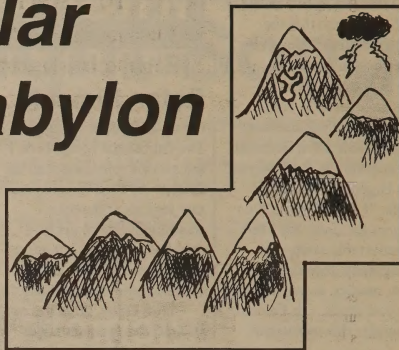

"You might notice,"

Nibble said, "that Utah Valley sits between seven peaks. You might notice that BYU herself sits in the shadow of seven peaks."

Nibble did not go so far as to call BYU or Provo the whore of Babylon because doing so would constitute an act of free thought and would thus clearly violate BYU's famed academic freedom policy. Word leaked out nevertheless, and local church and civic leaders scrambled to save the city's reputation.

Provo Mayor Joe Jerk spent the afternoon in negotiation with Seven Peaks resort owner and insurance fraud specialist Vik Orchard.

Jerk asked Orchard to consider changing the name of his waterside/golf course/hotel to "Six Peaks" or "Eight Peaks." Although Orchard was hesitant, claiming that changing the name of his resort would ruin his plans to strip down and build a ski resort on peak #7, but Jerk seemed optimistic by day's end. "Hey," he said, flashing a number one sign to reporters, "Money magazine rated us #1! If you want to call us a whore, at least we're whore #1!"

Bob Milktoast, BYU religion professor and long-time Nibble rival, offered an alternative scriptural explanation. Milktoast claimed that since the whore of Babylon sits on the waters, it must be a city closer to Utah Lake—like Lindon or Vineyard. "Not that I'm indicting Geneva Steel in this," Milktoast said, speaking to the press from the Joseph Smith Building's newly dedicated Joe Cannon Exemplary Manhood Award Hall.

Face of Al Gore Seen in Cougareat Food!

Strange things are afoot at the Cougareat.

Just one week after furor over the "Flying Taco Salad" phenomenon died down, several students have reported seeing the face of Vice President Al Gore in an order of the Cougareat's curly fries.

Lamont Ringle, the first student to discover Gore's face, told his compelling story: "I looked down, and there he was. I couldn't bear to eat it, so I gave it to a member of the College Democrats."

John Rewald, director of food services for BYU, claims the sightings are simply the fatigue-induced hallucinations of students under stress. "BYU Food Services has a policy of not shaping any of its products to look like any Vice Presidents past, present, or future," said Rewald. (He later admitted off the record, however, that Cougareat cooks used to form beef patties in the shape of Ronald Reagan.) "I saw Ringle's curly fry, and I thought it looked much more like former White House Chief of Staff Al Haig than like Mr. Gore."

Despite Rewald's claims, the administration has formed an ad hoc committee to investigate the growing number of potato-oriented complaints. "It's just a routine check. Every five years, we inspect the Cougareat for any food item shaped like an elected official. This investigation should come as no surprise to anyone. This has nothing to do with that Al Gore thing," said committee chair Preston Landgren, speaking to reporters Monday.

Landgren excused himself before anyone could ask him any questions. "Excuse me!" said Landgren.

The student body appears to be taking the news objectively. "I know that this is a total miracle," proclaimed Barbara Traasdahl, a BYU student from Boulder City, Nevada, "This means that President Clinton will soon die and Al Gore will soon be President Gore. I can prove it, too!"

A family from Eureka, Utah recently made a pilgrimage to BYU to see the oddly shaped potato, which is now on display in the Memorial Lounge.

The members of the Edgemont 35th ward Primary stumbled upon an amazing find last week while planting daisies in a local park: a 6'10", 300 lb. Nephite warrior frozen in ice. The excited children thawed the warrior, who promptly killed fifteen of them. Finally able to stop his rampage, they taught the Nephite of his origins and of history since his time.

Targeteer A Brian Downs was the first to notice the frozen Nephite. "I was trying to dig through to Australia," relates Brian, whose younger brother Philip was killed in the rampage. "Then I hit this chunk of ice and the teachers made us dig it up." Primary President Pauline Lenihan decided to take the Nephite and the entire Primary to her house. The children, supervised by teachers and working in shifts according to their Primary classes, thawed out the Nephite using various torches and heaters available at the Lenihan house.

"I feel so awful! I decided to see if I could revive Bardonani (the Nephite warrior) with some smelling salts," says Sister LaFredrica Schwartz, second counselor in the Primary presidency. "Actually I was using some lasagna Sister Lenihan had left over from last month. Anyway, he jumped up, unsheathed his sword, and plowed into the Sunbeams. It was horrible!" Fifteen children died under the sword in a matter of seconds: six Sunbeams, two Star As, three Star Bs, one Merrie Miss, and three Blazers. Provo police officers responding to the scene refused either to shoot or apprehend Bardonani on the grounds that "BYU would probably want to examine such a spectacular find," reports police spokesman Bill Staples.

BYU psychologists called in to examine Bardonani reported that the Nephite was in excellent physical and mental condition. According to Dr. Fred Rubble, Bardonani "awoke thinking he was still in the heart of the final battle at Cumorah. Apparently, he stopped to take a twenty minute power nap, and ended up being frozen in a very mobile type of ice formation, known as a 'Blitzkrieg glacier,' several hours the battle ended." Dr. Barney Flint further described the adjustment Bardonani faces as "rather difficult." He is currently living in Wymount Terrace until further plans are made regarding his future.

"Rush Rooms" Mushroom in Provo, UT

Lunchrooms, bars, and Stepdown Lounges all over the country have recently transformed into "Rush Rooms." People gather daily in Rush Rooms to listen to outspoken conservative Rush Limbaugh's radio talk show. Newsweek magazine reported on the phenomenon in a special feature on white male paranoia, citing the number of Rush Rooms nationwide at 100. Since the article, however, numbers have risen considerably, particularly in the midwest. Limbaugh, buoyed by his bestselling book The Way Things Ought to Be, has enjoyed a special measure of success in the Provo, UT area. Provo now has the highest per-capita ratio of Rush Rooms in the nation.

"Rush takes the hard line on democrats, women, minorities, intellectuals, gays, vegetarians, pacifists, environmentalists, single parents, poor people, sick people, and thin people. And feminists. Especially feminists," says Erikson Leblanc, 22, a Limbaugh fan and BYU Business major from Kayesville. "I like that because I can relate."

BYU students who wish to attend a Rush Room need not look far. "There are 38 Rush Rooms in the Tanner Building alone," says Taylor Wu, a student who works the early morning shift as a Tanner Building janitor. "I know because they leave their Snapple bottles and pork rinds bags all over the place. I hear there are a couple in the JSB, too." Limbaugh's show is also broadcast in the library LRC. The University may invite Limbaugh to speak at a Marriott Center forum, and is considering offering credit through the Political Science department to those who listen to the show. Local stores are now offering "I Survived the Rush Ordeal" T-shirts and knee-length shorts.

"Behold, it came to pass that Moroni was thus breaking down the wars and contentions among his own people, and subjecting them to peace and civilization."

Jerrod is:

- working for the Horror Code Office
- seeking a career with the Marines or church security.

MARRIOTT CENTER DRAMA

The Real Ordeal: The Marriott Truths Behind the Mystery

Over 15,000 people witnessed the Marriott Center Ordeal, which means there are 15,000 accounts of the ordeal. Libeok Publishing Company of Orem, Utah has collected 1,000 of these fascinating stories and published them in a new three-volume book set, The Marriott Center Ordeal: I Was There! Libeok has given the Enquirer permission to reprint a few of these real stories from real people who were really there:

"I was sitting right next to Cody Judy and I immediately saw that he was an evil man. All of the sudden he floated up from his seat and floated over the security guards, telling everyone to back away. He had all the powers of hell at his fingertips and he was using them to try and overtake the whole building in evil. Then someone started singing near me. I quickly looked around to see who it was but no one was actually singing! It was a sound like a choir of angels joining in song. Then I saw the great spirit overtake the intruder and he fell to the ground as several faithful elders piled on top of him." -Fred S.

"All right, so I'm watching the fireside and this guy comes and says he's got a gun or something. Maybe a bomb too. He makes every body leave the stand and then everyone starts singing. That's when I decide I've had enough and make my own dash for the stage. I jump on top of the guy and punch him a few times. It was really cool!" -Norm A.

"I wasn't actually at the fireside. I was feeling ill after a heavy dinner and decided to lie down for a while. Next thing I knew, it was 8:30 p.m. My roommates woke me up and told me all about the ruckus. It sounded really scary. That's the only fireside I've missed this semester and I vowed never to miss another." -Rita G.

"I was up in the higher elevation bleachers directly south of the podium. I was in the Green Berets before I served my mission, and since I went to Utah on my mission, I learned that you always need to carry a handgun around this place. Before the fireside, I had the impression that I needed to hook up a silencer to my 9mm automatic. When the situation began, I took cover in the L portal and leveled my weapon at the perpetrator. The reason they were able to subdue Judy was that I had shot him an instant before they tackled him. The police, unwilling to admit that a handgun can do some good, have covered up the fact that Judy suffered a gunshot wound to the right shoulder from my weapon. I've signed up again with Green Berets." -Hal Q.

"I can't remember where I was in the Marriott Center, but I do recall the miracle that occurred that blessed night. I looked up at the scoreboard at some point and saw a great hand underneath it that reached out and struck that devil holding us hostage in our

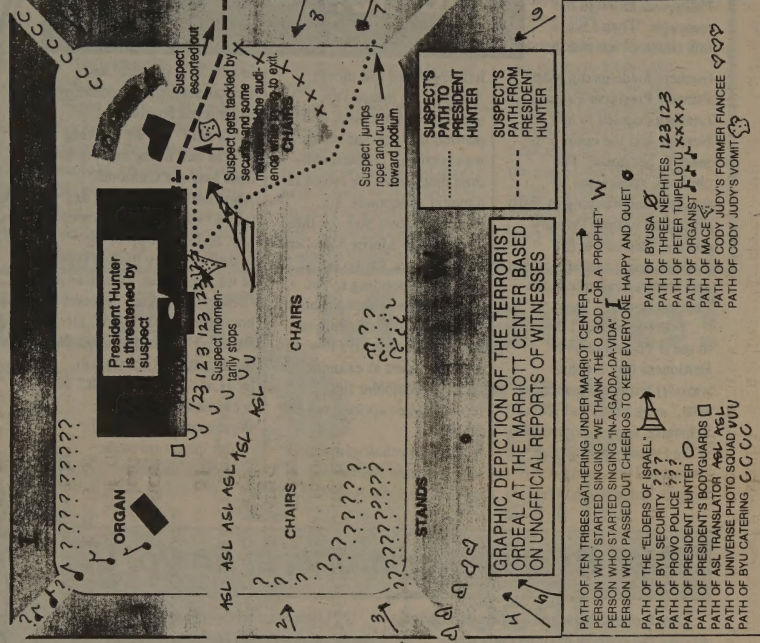

Cody Judy Was Actually for Waco, Texas Upon Escape

Cody Judy, star of the Marriott Center Ordeal, would-be prophet, and recent escapee from the Utah State Mental Hospital, was actually on his way to Waco, Texas according to Provo police.

Authorities have come across a letter written by Judy to Branch Davidian leader, would-be Messiah, and prolific sperm donor David Koresh. Judy apparently wrote Koresh to offer his help in freeing the self-proclaimed Messiah from "those heartless government goons."

"I've got your ticket out of there, Dave," Judy wrote. "Just say the word and I'll be on my way." According to fellow patients at the Mental Hospital, the rescue mission was all Judy talked about. "He kept saying he wouldn't blow this one," said one patient, who couldn't remember his name. "Cody wanted another shot at being President of the Church and figured that Messiah Koresh was the man to make it happen."

Judy was on his way to Waco when he stopped at the Lehi Circle K to buy a roll of electrical tape and a 64 oz. Dr. Pepper. He apparently asked the cashier for directions to Waco, Texas but was misunderstood.

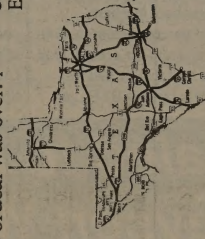

own building. I immediately fainted. When I was revived, I thought that I had been delicious about that hand. My roommate told me she had seen it, too, and so had many other people around us. I went home immediately and wrote in my journal." -Sarah D.

"Where was I? Man, I was outta there as soon as that yahoo popped up. My girlfriend stuck around, though."

Boone J.

"The real miracle was discovered after the whole ordeal was over. I know this guy whose dad is in the Provo Police, and he spoke to the officer who took the 'demonator' out of the Marriott Center. He said the 'electrical tape' wrapped around it had no seams and was like nothing that could be produced by humans. The only explanation the police could come up with was that Cody Judy really did have a demonator in his hand, and that it was miraculously changed into a phone receiver before he could do any harm. Same thing with the briefcase." -Eddie E stood. Circle K nightshift employee Manny Nogales thought he said, "Can you tell me how to get to the KSL broadcast studio?" Manny sent Judy the only way he knew to get to Salt Lake City, involving an intricate course of football paths and rock walls.

The rest is history. A dishevelled and bewildered Judy found himself at the doorstep of the KSL studios and in the hands of the Salt Lake City police before he realized he had been steered astray.

This was not the first time that Judy has been plagued by misinformation. The notorious incident that started his life of pious crime, when he was arrested for leaving a shipment of guns and knives at Temple Square, was actually a sad mistake. He was actually planning on pawning the weaponry to earn money for his mission but confused by the Salt Lake City grid system, he left the bundle on the sidewalk.

Inside sources also say that Judy often has trouble finding his cell room and has been beaten a number of times by short-tempered inmates, surprised to find Judy under their covers.

Cougarettes Retreat to Top Secret Training Camp

In the wake of the Marriott Center Ordeal here at BYU and the escape of self-proclaimed prophet Cody Judy, BYU's famed Cougarette dance squad has retreated to a top secret location in the Mt. Nebo area, reportedly to be trained as new bodyguards for high-ranking Church officials.

"It's a perfect plan," explained Church spokesman Donny Fever. "The Cougarettes look completely inconspicuous here at BYU—like the average General Authority's granddaughter."

Appearances can be deceiving here at BYU. In reality, the Cougarettes aren't just model young women, they're deadly bodyguards and living shields.

"We've found that thanks to hair spray build up, Cougarettes' hair can repel bullets. So can the sequins on their dance uniforms. So can their control-top pantyhose," explained Fever. "They're naturally equipped for the job."

The Cougarettes will improve on nature during their camp/retreat, during which they will reportedly study small caliber weapons, martial arts, and terrorist tactics.

Speaking by telephone from their top secret location, Cougarettes' team captain LaDawnEte Johnson said, "We're stoked. We're going to be just like Charlie's Angels, except we'll dress better. No terry cloth short-shorts, no espadrilles."

Three Smith Family Living Center pre-school teachers were arrested late Friday on charges of parking in a "no parking" zone, failure to yield, and jaywalking. Police were tipped off by an anonymous phone call from a parent who claimed that her child had complained of having to cross the sidewalk between the Harold B. Lee Library and the Smith Family Living Center against a heavy stream of mountain bikers.

When the police sent an undercover policeman to the preschool, posing as a four-year-old Wymount child, they found that the preschool teachers, who were teaching the children as a requirement for their Family Science degree, were actually the ringleaders of an anti-traffic rule cartel that has been frustrating BYU bike cops for months now.

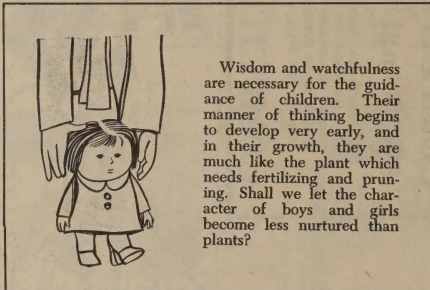

Apparently the teachers regularly led the children across the busy sidewalk during the noon hour, against a stream of hundreds of much larger college students. Police reports show that a BYU campus tour golf cart had to swerve off the sidewalk and into the Ute statue to avoid the children. The driver, LeRoy Pederson, 23, of Sandy, said, "It was horrible. They were all holding hands in a long chain and crossing the sidewalk. It was obvious that those teachers were at the head of the chain, leading."

A source close to the second-cousin-twice-removed-on-the-father's-side of one of a good friend of one of the teachers said that the teachers always took the children across that path to the library and the children's book section.

Many parents commented that their children displayed

Wisdom and watchfulness are necessary for the guidance of children. Their manner of thinking begins to develop very early, and in their growth, they are much like the plant which needs fertilizing and pruning. Shall we let the character of boys and girls become less nurtured than plants?

"It was horrible. They were all holding hands in a long chain and crossing the sidewalk. It was obvious that those teachers were at the head of the chain, leading."

excessive fear of bicycles and golf carts after the event. "We still can't get our son to go out for his weekly golf match," cried one parent. "And we had pegged him as the next Tom Kite."

"My child now cries at the sight of training wheels," said another troubled mother.

"And he was going to be the next Greg LeMond."

After the police arrested the preschool teachers, several parents withdrew their children from the school. One parent said that he had lost complete faith in BYU, and another moved to Mesa, Arizona to get her children away from the "terrible environment here at BYU."

The children who were involved in the affair are currently undergoing traffic rehabilitation treatment at the Utah Valley Traffic School in Spanish Fork.

"I was Sealed to Elvis!" Claims Payson Woman

Payson resident Elva Lindsey revealed yesterday that she was sealed to rock legend Elvis Presley in a secret ceremony in the Las Vegas temple last June.

"Yes, he's alive," Lindsey said. "And he's mine."

Lindsey told reporters the story of her courtship with the King. "I was wearing my Young Women's medallion to his farewell 'Aloha' concert, and I was seated near the stage. He saw my medallion and winked at me. Fifteen years later, I met him on the Vegas strip, when I was down on a FunBus out of St. George. I was wearing my medallion still. He passed by my slot machine in Circus Circus, saw my medallion, and stopped. We were married the next day."

Elva revealed her story when her neighbor and fellow Elvis devotee Elveeta Pedersen decided that she would get the King's work done by proxy. "My son Elvin was going to do it," Elveeta said, through tears. "I was stitching white bugle beads onto a white shirt for him." Elvin is a licensed Elvis impersonator, known widely for his accurate portrayal of Elvis during his "bloated" creative period.

Elva claims that Elvis has already done his own work, but Elveeta claims that records show an "Elvis Aron Presley," not "Elvis Aaron Presley," as was the King's legal name.

Elva calls it a "simple clerical error." But Elveeta calls it conspiracy. "I know Elva's doing this just to spite me. She's just jealous that my painting of Elvis on velvet sheds real tears whenever I play 'Love Me Tender.'"

Women's Services and Support Office Missing after Rainstorm

April showers may bring May flowers, but they also brought the end of the new BYU Women's Services and Support Office.

The office was reported missing after a set of light spring showers crossed campus last week.

"The place must have just blown away," groundscrew official Roy Peterpumpkineater said, scratching his head, pacing around the botany pond. "It was just here. Maybe my crews raked it up."

The Office was originally located in a lean-to on the north end of the botany pond.

"It's okay," commented one woman student. "I don't miss it much. It was hard to find in the first place."

Another woman student agreed, "Yeah, you could walk by it and not even know it was there."

Face Of Donnie Osmond Miraculously Appears In Bookstore Fudge

Following a recent outbreak of miraculous appearances of the Virgin Mary in the Holy Land and the face of Jesus over Somalia, the face of Donnie Osmond was recently found in a batch of White Chunk-Carmel-Pecan-Rocky Road fudge in the BYU Bookstore.

The discovery was made early Monday morning when Heather Schmeather attempted to purchase three and a half pounds of the fudge.

"It was no coincidence! I had been struggling all weekend trying to decide whether I should take that country dancing class this spring, and as soon as I saw Donnie's boyish grin I knew what I had to do. You see, Marie was a little bit country while Donnie was always a little bit rock n' roll. I know beyond a shadow of a doubt that it was a sign from heaven not to take the country dance class," Heather recently stated. She has since registered for the intense but popular three-day Emergency/Marriage Prep class offered spring term.

The miracle has sparked a massive pilgrimage to the sacred site. Thousands from all over the U.S. and Canada throng through the bookstore to get a glimpse of the famous fudge. "This beats textbook sales by a mile! One ounce chips of the fudge are going for eighty bucks, we're selling T-shirts with 'I survived the Osmond Ordeal' on the front (Honor Code approved, of course), and we're charging a five dollar admission fee. We even had to take out all the books and install moving sidewalks to make room for everyone. Heck, we're the Mecca of the west," remarked Billy Willy, bookstore spokesman and Twilight Zone bulletin board responder. "One of the advantages of the T-shirts is that you don't have to survive this Osmond Ordeal to wear one. The early eighties were one prolonged Osmond Ordeal." When asked about future plans, Willy stated, "The fudge will be renamed and marketed as 'Osmond Surprise'—in keeping with the family's musical success."

Jenny Schmenny, chair of the Provo/Orem Chamber of Commerce explained in a recent press conference that the event has boosted the local economy. "We're doing better than when Money Magazine said we were the number one most livable city in America. We're sending out press packets with airbrushed photos—the whole bit."

Authorities claim that employees made the fudge the previous Friday in the usual manner, except for a little extra vanilla that was accidentally spilled into the mixture. "I'm surprised it didn't turn out to be Vanilla Ice—not that it would have made any difference," remarked Edwin Meddlewinner. Fudge counter worker Mary Canary vowed that the fudge had no distinguishable features when it was set out that morning. "I don't know how it happened! I heard Donnie was making a comeback but I didn't believe it 'till now. If I've learned one thing from all this, it's, 'Don't mess with the pop stars of Israel!'"

Donnie's mother lamented that the release of "Soldier of Love" marked a turning point in Donnie's career. "He started wearing camouflage and combat boots on all his dates and social engagements. Now he just sits around the house stockpiling assault weapons, calling 900 numbers, and watching 'Love Boat' re-runs. (He really admires Captain Stubing.) Then last week I caught him with a Soldier of Fortune magazine. I don't know what this is all about, but you can bet there's some sort of love-desperate mercenary action behind it."

Donnie was taking his leather jacket to the dry cleaner and was unavailable for comment.

Parking Problem Resolved by Building Relocation

BYU students and faculty alike will be pleased to hear that the campus parking crisis has been resolved. The administration, through counsel with Jeane Dixon and Cody Judy, has learned that the Joseph Smith Building will be taken up to join the City of Enoch on April 6. Plans are already being made to pave over the space the building now occupies to construct a multilevel parking lot.

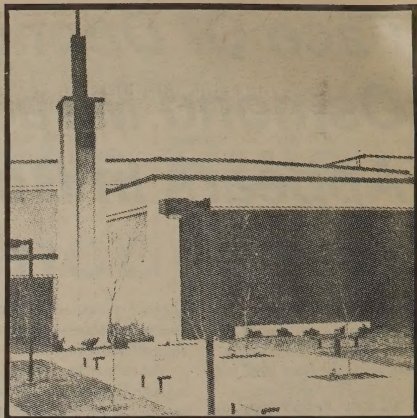

One key administrator, speaking on conditions of anonymity, took a break from expelling students to say, "We'll be sorry to see [the Departments of Ancient Scripture and Church History and Doctrine go, especially since we were only able to use the building for such a short time. But this is a great opportunity for them, and of course we won't hold religion faculty to their contracts. We're very proud of all they've done."

The administration has evidently been aware of the impending translation for some time, as it has wisely chosen to leave a huge pile of dirt and rubble directly east of the JSB. The dirt will be used to fill in the crater left when the building is taken up. All BYU wards presently meeting in the JSB will volunteer to shovel the dirt into the crater during the next several Sacrament meetings, and their worship services will be reassigned to other campus buildings as soon as the task is finished.

The JSB's translation poses a problem for those of us left in this earthly sphere: who will teach BYU's religion classes? For the time being, students will have to fulfill GE religion requirements either through Independent Study or correspondence with Ricks College. Due to budget constraints, the administration is considering granting religion credit for classes taught by humanists in the Honors Program, the College of Humanities, and other departments not currently recognized by the Department of Orthodox Church History and Doctrine.

Students enrolled this semester in classes taught in the JSB will be graded according to classwork completed prior to April 6.

Tipper to Give Tips to EFY Kids

On Monday, officials of the Especially for Youth Program here at BYU announced that Second Lady Tipper Gore will be an official speaker throughout their summer program. Beginning with the first EFY session, Mrs. Gore will teach a seminar entitled "Being Good and Being Bad: Not Listening to Evil Music and Listening to Evil Music." Full details of her engagement are still unknown, but an unidentified source at EFY says that Mrs. Gore will be staying at Wymount Terrace with her four children. Vice President Gore will remain in Washington.

The reason behind Mrs. Gore's hiring, explains EFY chief supervisor Will Woodruff Jensen, is that "these kids are just sick of having to listen to that infernal Lynn Bryson tape every year at some youth fireside. Our studies showed that for full effectiveness, kids must hear his tape in a fireside setting at least annually. We figure that with Sis. Gore it's a once in a lifetime treatment. Her seminar will ensure lifelong enjoyment of only worthy music."

According to sources close to EFY, Mrs. Gore's technique will be based on live music performances by questionable groups. On the line-up so far are Ice-T's Body Count, speed metal gods Anthrax, country star Billy Ray Cyrus, the Chris Cornell-led Soundgarden, rap's A Tribe Called Quest, the newly reformed Black Sabbath, and Boston ska-core monsters The Mighty Mighty Bosstones. Also, sources say that the hardcore band Angry Samoans will reform for a one-off performance sometime during the summer. MC-ing the seminar will be MTV's Fab Five Freddy. Each seminar will feature a panel discussion. The panel will include BYU President Rex Lee, Utah Governor Mike Leavitt, LDS composers Janice Kapp Perry and Joy Saunders Lundberg, the presidents of five nationwide pro-family organizations, and Mrs. Gore. Representing the music industry will be Jonny Jones, shipping clerk at Shimmy-Shimmy Disk Records.

Zelda's Zodiac:

☆☆ Your Guide to the Stars ☆☆☆

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan.19):

A Siberian woman will buy you a Dairy Queen Dilly Bar around the 2nd or 3rd of April. Avoid visits to the doctor all month, especially for hemorrhoid ailments.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18):

Your dental appointment on the 23rd will end in tragedy as your hygienist informs you that Tartar Control Crest alone will not cut it, and you must also floss.

Pisces (Feb. 19-Mar. 20):

Jupiter will cross your constellation on the 26th, causing the death of a roommate and a call from Rex Lee congratulating you on early graduation. Congratulations

Aries (Mar. 21-Apr.19):

You share your birth month with famous Aries like Mr. Whipple (of "Please don't squeeze the Charmin" fame), Julio Iglesias (actually, he's a Libra.—Ed.), Marie Osmond, and my grandmama, Ruth Zanafafa Straus. Aries tend to be whiny, greedy, irritable, and impatient; other than that, they make good companions. According to Zelda's cosmic omniscience, Aries are most likely to color-code their sock drawers and eat medium salsa with lightly salted chips. You will discover unthinkable wealth in a public restroom on the 29th.

Taurus (Apr. 20-May 20):

All your fantasies, desires, and needs will be fulfilled by a lumberjack named Franz. Your bishop will understand.

Gemini (May 21-Jun. 21):

Shadows are cast on your constellation, creating turmoil in the lives of all Geminis. You will discover an evil twin, Jeremy, who will invade your body at inopportune moments.

Cancer (Jun. 22-Jul. 22):

Don't accept that job offer from the ACME Home Assembly Company. It can only mean trouble from that damned coyote. Ed McMahon will not come to your home, he will not award you the $10 million sweepstakes prize, and your friends will not all be envious, because you will not drive off in a cherry red convertible.

Leo (Jul. 23-Aug. 22):

Do not offer Kool-Aid to a man in a turban, as there is a tradition in some mid-eastern country which could result in your being whisked away to join his harem of love slaves. Other than that, things look good.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sep. 22):

Don't wear chiffon, taffeta, or socks with heels to testimony meeting this month, especially you elders and high priests! Be sure to pluck/shave your moustache before meeting your fiancée's family. Do not purchase tropical pets on a whim on the 31st. Look for a letter from the FBI on the 13th.

Libra (Sep. 23-Oct. 23):

Because of a zodiac catastrophe, you will inevitably go to school naked twice this week, and everyone in your religion class will condemn you (except, of course, the other Libras).

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21):

A phone call from your old "friend," Guido, on the 28th could cause you either to leave the country or wear cement shoes on a trip to Utah Lake.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):

A sibling will become famous this month, giving you the opportunity to sell embarrassing family photos and publish your memoirs. You will either become a vegetarian or a cannibal after a freak accident on the 27th.

STUDENT ENQUIRER

Surprise! Student Review Actually a Standards Office "Sting" Operation

Caustic collegiates are now finding themselves caught in the cogs of a carefully conceived conspiracy.

For seven years now, Brigham Young University's Standards Office has lured unsuspecting hellions into the ranks of its puppet organization, the Student Review. Touted as an "unofficial" student magazine, the Review is actually run by former Standards violators who are working off their punishment by writing for the supposedly "subversive" publication. The staff recruits new blood at the beginning of each semester and then, in exchange for parole, turns in all newcomers to the Standards Office where they are reprimanded for their behavior and let in on the secret behind the Student Review front.

This is NOT a street gang

One of the "founders" of the Student Review, B.J. Fogg, was actually caught late one night on campus wearing nothing but a Testing Center bag. Rather than have him write an essay on decency and respect for school property, Standards decided to go a little further. What resulted is now a rascally and rebellious rag that rakes around 50 violators in to Standards each semester. Boisterous BYU brats cannot seem to resist the temptation to belt a little bile on the brows of the administration. Hear what Brian Hombredaigua, current co-editor-in-chief of Student Review, has to say about his capture. "It seemed like the ideal place for me to get my views heard. Boy, was I duped."

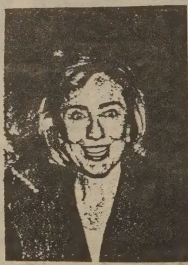

Head of Standards, Mr. Reelim In, cannot believe how effective this ploy has been. "It's obviously a fake," he chimed. "How could anyone really believe the stuff they print?"

"It seemed like the ideal place for me to get my views heard. Boy, was I duped."
